What is FERPA?
The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (FERPA) is a federal law designed to protect the confidentiality of your education records. FERPA governs the release and access to these records.

What are my rights under FERPA?
You have the right to:

- Inspect and review your education records.
- Request the amendment of education records that you believe to be inaccurate or misleading.
- Consent to disclosures of personally identifiable information contained in your education records except to the extent that FERPA authorizes disclosure without consent.
- File a complaint with U.S. Department of Education if you believe that Madison College has failed to comply with the requirements of FERPA:

Is Madison College required to obtain written consent to disclose my education records?
Information that is designated to be directory information does not require your consent prior to disclosure.
FERPA requires that Madison College obtain your written consent prior to disclosing any other personally identifiable information contained in your education records except to school officials with legitimate educational interests or other authorized representatives under FERPA. The following are examples of valid FERPA exceptions for releasing education record information: request from Department of Defense representatives for student recruiting information, legal subpoena, or in an emergency situation, where the knowledge of the information is necessary to protect the health or safety of students or other persons.

Who is considered a school official with legitimate educational interest?
Madison Area Technical College discloses education records without a student’s prior written consent under the FERPA exception for disclosure to school officials with legitimate educational interests. A school official is a person employed by Madison College in an administrative, supervisory, academic or research, or support staff position (including security personnel); a person or company with whom Madison College has contracted as its agent to provide a service instead of using Madison College employees (such as an attorney, auditor, or collection agent); a person serving on the Board of Trustees; or a student serving on an official committee, such as a disciplinary or grievance committee, or assisting another school official in performing his or her tasks. A school official has a legitimate educational interest if the official needs to review an education record in order to fulfill his or her professional responsibilities for the college.
